

MAJOR SOLAR FLARE: INNER CHANGE AWARENESS

February 17, 2011

By Michael Erlewine (Michael@Erlewine.net)

Not the largest solar flare in history (that was Nov. 4. 2003), still this solar flare is the strongest since December 2006 and (more important) has been termed "geoeffective" which means that it is located in the very center of the Sun and therefore coming directly at Earth. It is hitting today and it is many times longer than the width of Earth so we will be bathed in its influence for some time - perhaps days.

What does this mean? Good question. In esoteric astrology, the Sun is the heart of our innermost self, not to mention that externally it provides all heat, light, warmth, growth, etc. Think about that for just a nanosecond please.

A flare is an eruption of solar mass and matter, this one central to us, so look inside and not outside for its effects. And inside means not just a little inside, but deep inside as in: who we are or feel we are or wonder-we-are. Such a deep shift or "touch" may slow us down a bit today or even for days and our decisions, outer events, projects, may well go on hold for a while, while we reorient ourselves and take it all in. Don't fight it.

These solar flares can be very strong events and I tend to just roll with them and not be too upset that whatever schedule I have going gets a little trampled on or rearranged. It is all good and awareness of these events on our part depends on how aware we are of any inner goings-on. This is why I study meditation because I want to witness these inner changes and be aware of them in the "now" and as they happen.

Nothing touches us more deeply than solar change. And there is absolutely nothing we can do about it, so time out a bit and experience them if you can.

Please feel free to share so others may be aware of this time.
