

BLUE*STAR IS NOW READY
June 7, 2012

By Michael Erlewine (Michael@Erlewine.net)

As you know I blog almost every day, hopefully with something of interest to you, at least once in a while. I have seldom even mentioned the professional astrological software that I (and my team) author, so I hope you will take the time to consider our new Blue*Star program. It is a new concept, a software program written for those who know nothing about astrology.

Blue*Star is designed for laptops, and for astrologers on the go. It does not do everything a large astrology program does, but it does what most astrologers need. It also has two distinct modes, a first of its kind.

The Calculation Mode has all the normal wheels and lists of things you would expect: creating and saving charts, etc., gorgeous wheels, attractive PDF printouts, etc. It is all there and easy to access.

But Blue*Star also has something new, an interpretation mode for those new to astrology, sixteen complete interpretive reports in PDF-style format, fully illustrated, and concise. I personally wrote the interpretive text for all the reports. And while these reports were designed to be read by beginners (non-astrologers), some of them (like the Landscape Saturn Cycle report) are so helpful, I find myself using it all the time.

Blue*Star, which comes with both the calculation and interpretive modes, lists for $199 but is available to my Facebook friend for an introductory price of just $99, half price. Access to this many reports used to cost thousands of dollars. Now you can have perpetual instant reports for your entire family and client base at a moment's notice. Just press a button to view any of the sixteen reports.

It does all of the techniques I use here on Facebook, including the StarTypes and Saturn Returns. Check it out please. Look at the images and read what it does. More details for ordering here:
