

EMMA TO VISIT
March 28, 2013

By Michael Erlewine (Michael@Erlewine.net)

That's right; Emma is coming upstate to spend some time with grandma and grandpa. We will have to re-childproof our house, since Emma is a whole order of magnitude bigger, faster, sharper, and more talkative than ever. The girl knows what she wants and is not afraid to try and have it.

I will be once again getting my Emma fix, which has in these last weeks been dependent on snapshots and short videos send from her mom Anne's iPhone. Girls just want to have fun, right?

And I can see from some videos that she has been to a big library. I saw her carrying around books, getting them from and trying to put them back on the shelf, so there will be reading, for sure. And grandpa's office is a main place to hang out. Emma heads for it every chance she gets, so I had better be ready. No such thing as being ready for her, so I am in for it. Lucky me!

And, who knows, spring might even decide to come and Emma and I can go for a walk outside in the sun. And there will be bugs and flowers and eventually warm breezes once again.

Emma is coming!

[Photo by my daughter Anne]

